

Legal assistance for creating a special needs trust

One of the many benefits of your Legal Plan

Estate planning is important for every family, but takes on even more significance when you have a special needs child. Ensuring your child is taken care of as part of your estate plan requires careful consideration and planning with the assistance of an attorney.

What a special needs trust does

A special needs trust can help you to provide for your child after your passing and minimize the impact on their ability to receive Social Security and Medicaid benefits.

By setting up a special needs trust you can put money aside for your child (the beneficiary) and appoint a trustee to oversee how the money is spent. The trust would pay for the designated expenses — including personal care, education, physical therapy and more.

Choosing a trustee carefully is an important part of setting up a special needs trust, so an attorney can talk through the responsibilities involved and help you determine who would be best suited.

How our Legal Plan can help

Our network attorneys can discuss your situation with you and help you get started designating a trustee and setting up the trust. For plans that include trust coverage, the Legal Plan fully covers the creation of a special needs trust from consultation with the attorney through drafting the document for your child.

Even if you only use the Legal Plan once in a year, the plan will likely pay for itself. MetLife Legal Plans also provides coverage for many other personal legal matters — such as estate planning, civil litigation defense and identity theft issues.

Consider this real member story:¹

“Just knowing that the attorney was going to be there and able to assist me and walk me through the process was stress-free.”
